Bigfoot Guess what else says whip-poor-will

By CHARLES LAMB

Maybe some of those whip-poor-wills people have been hearing in the woods all these years haven't been birds, but Bigfoot himself.

Vernita Frazier, 11, of 1915 McKinley Ave., Yakima, heard a whistling sound like a whip-poor-will at 1:30 p.m. Saturday while picnicking with her family near Clear Lake on White Pass Highway. Others on the outing heard the sound too.

But what she said she saw on a wooded trail near the lake a few minutes later was no bird. "He was black, all hairy, at least seven and a half feet tall and had big lips and big eyebrows," excitedly reported Vernita later.

"My sisters, Mrs. Linda Randall, 24, and Faith Frazier, 10, had also heard the whistle and a deep growl, but thought it was some boys trying to scare us." Vernita said she and her sisters finished their picnic lunch and started to take a hike.

"I started back to get my coat and then I saw him. He was coming down the trail right toward me, no more than 10 feet away. He was so tall I had to look up to see his face.

"I screamed and he stopped and growled. Then he turned and ran up the hill." The girl said the huge creature took four bounds and was out of sight in the brush. She recalled seeing a red tinge on his chest, as if he had been recently wounded.

Vernita's two sisters, her brother, Fencet Frazier, 12, and cousin, Glen Casey, 13, heard the scream and growl and said they caught glimpses of the retreating Sasquatch-like beast as he cleared a hilltop, thrashing through the brush and small trees.

Vernita was so pale and shaken when she and the other young people got to the car that the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willie G. Frazier, decided to leave the area. As they were loading up, an angry growl could be heard in the distance, prompting the family to hasten its departure.
